

A sleepover, also called a pajama party or a slumber party, is a kind of party that is very popular with American kids and teens (especially girls). People sometimes have a sleepover to celebrate a birthday or other special occasion.

If you are invited to a sleepover, you should bring a pillow,¹ your sleeping bag,² and, of course, don't forget your pajamas!³ Your parents will take you to the party and pick you up the next morning.

At a sleepover guests usually play games, eat, and talk until very late at night. Parents can complain, but sometimes guests never go to sleep!

At a sleepover, it is also common to have pillow fights,

watch scary movies,

order pizza and eat sweets.

At a sleepover for girls, guests usually put on nail polish⁴ and do their hair and make-up.

LESSON 7

In the lesson, a boy slipped because he didn't see this sign:

Signs are important because they can help prevent accidents. Here are some important street signs that are common in the U.S.

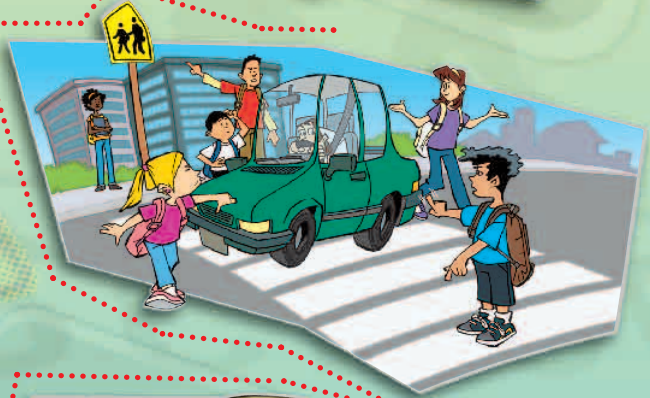

NO PARKING

Parking is not permitted.

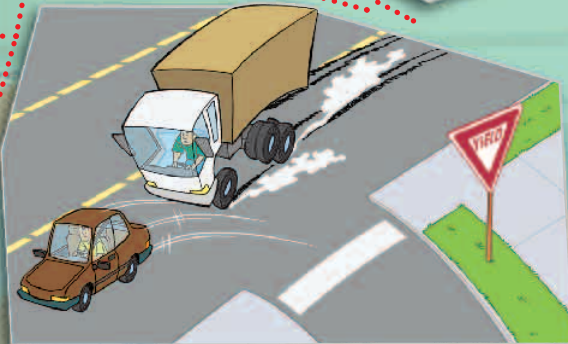

SCHOOL CROSSING

Schoolchildren cross the street at this location.

YIELD

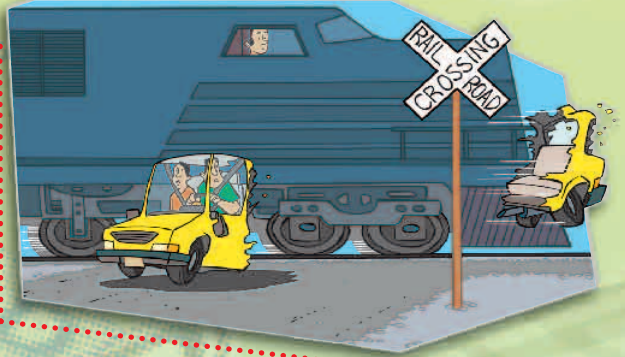

To permit other vehicles on a principal road to go first.

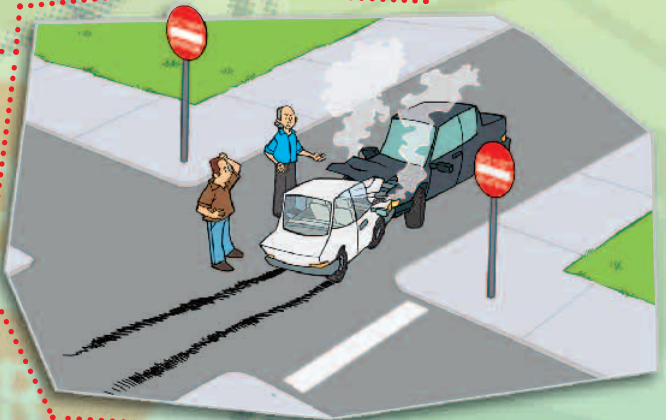

RAILROAD CROSSING

Trains cross the road at this location.

DO NOT ENTER

It is not permitted to enter.

DEAD END

This refers to a street that ends with no exit.

