

THE EXHIBIT

Chelsea: What are you doing on Saturday?

Tim: Nothing. I don't have any plans.

Chelsea: Do you want to go to the art museum? There's a new exhibit on the famous cave paintings in France.

Tim: Cave paintings? Don't you mean graffiti?

Chelsea: No! This is prehistoric art done by people who lived many thousands of years ago.

Tim: But how did they do it? I didn't think that prehistoric humans had paint.

Chelsea: The artists made paint with natural things like animal fat, and they painted on walls and ceilings deep within caves.

Tim: Wow. But what did they paint? Rocks?

Chelsea: No, they made dramatic paintings of animals and humans. Actually, anthropologists have learned a lot about the lives of these people through their art.

Tim: It sounds really interesting. I'd love to see the exhibit with you.

Chelsea: Great!
